Class Murder is the tenth instalment in the Geraldine Steel police series, but it's the first book that I have read by this author, and I loved it. I can also add that this book worked for me as a stand alone novel, although I now desperately want to go back and read the previous novels in the series.

Class Murder is a good crime thriller. However, I feel far too much space is given to focusing on Geraldine's life and back-story; her demotion to Detective Sergeant, her move to York, her concerns about her twin sister's recovery for a heroin addiction, etc. All this is fine but does it really need so much coverage?
